3rd Annual Antique Show & Sale

Plans are underway for the Beechwood Congregational Church to hold its 3rd Annual Antique Show & Sale at Town Hall on June 8 and 9.

Once again, there will be the opportunity to see a variety of antiques from dealers near and far. Many antiques such as fine glassware, furniture, jewelry and knick-knacks are just a few of the articles being offered.

Another feature of the show will be a snack bar which includes a choice of sandwiches, homemade squares, coffee, tea, and cold drinks.

By Joan Pinkham

"For, lo the winter is past; The rain is over and gone; The flowers appear on the earth; The time of the singing of the birds is come."

(Song of Solomon, Bible).

Also at an end is the New England Flower and Garden Show which graced the exhibition hall at Commonwealth Pier last week. As part of a steady stream of winter-weary visitors, we admired the lush green foliage, endless vista of azaleas and glimpses of spring-like miniature jonquils nestled beside splashing waterfalls.

Demure primroses peeked out from the shade of delicate dogwood trees. Among the window garden displays was that of the Norwell Garden Club which won second prize for a kitchen window with southern exposure filled with 26 varieties of herbs grown and arranged by the group.

"This is the year of the rose," a sign in a booth filled with miniature rose house plants proclaimed. Also popular was the African Violet booth, knee deep in admirers. Tulips were blooming, golden acacias from the Stone Estate in Manchester charmed all and everywhere, everywhere were people clutching their pussywillows or potted plants, or snapping photos of the kaleidoscope of color.

Entries in the amateur exhibit are changed three times

Obituaries

Eleanor Hyland

Graveside services were last Thursday in Mayflower Cemetery in Duxbury for Mrs. Eleanor Hyland (O'Brien) May, 68, of Cohasset, who died at home March 21 after a long illness.

Mrs. May was born in Boston and attended Boston schools and Garland Junior College. She belonged to the Women's City Club of Boston. Mrs. May lived in Cohasset 15 years.

She leaves her husband, Willard; a daughter, Mrs. Madeleine Eakin of New York City; two sisters, Mrs. Constance Sylvester of Norwell and Mrs. Madeleine O'Brien of Brookline; and a grandson.

Irwin Nelson

A scholarship has been established in the memory of Irwin Nelson, owner of Nelson's Music Shop on South Main St. who died Feb. 25 after a battle with cancer.

Nelson, a teacher at Scituate High School, loved music and was dedicated to his many students.

His fiancée, Carol Bates, established the Irwin Nelson Memorial Scholarship Fund at the school for contributions in his memory to help music students in years to come.

Donations are directed to the Scituate High School Music Department, care of Donald Hermance.

from the Garden

COHASSET GARDEN Club's entry at New England Spring Garden & Flower Show is this lily garden, awarded the Beacon Hill Garden Cup for most charming exhibit.

during the show, but among the prize-winning South Shore displays we glimpsed at the show on Monday were Mrs. John Bleakie's magnificent orchid plant, Dr. Edward Wood's prize orchids and Mrs. Edward White's rosemary grown from cuttings and blue hyacinth. Also, Jean Madden's prize bouganvillia and fittonia, the latter winning a special cultural award for excellence in growing. Rita Araphoff won prizes for her terrarium, crown of thorns and a large begonia in the window-sill division.

In the fall and spring, rarely in summer, great white birds with long, black-tipped wings can be seen fishing off our coast. These gannets sail high over the sea, wherever fish abound and at the right moment shoot down into the waves with a resounding splash that sometimes tosses up spray eight or 10 ft. high. With a wing-spread of about 72", seeing one is quite impressive.

This is why the Brookline Bird Club members were excited when they spotted them off of Duxbury on a recent trip. They were also treated to a glimpse of four rough-legged hawks. The birds were seen slowly flapping their four-foot wings not far above the meadows at Dwyer's Farm in Marshfield.

If ever spring came in like the proverbial lamb, it did last week and even the birds emerged to welcome the sun's warm rays. Over at the Natural Science Center a red-shouldered hawk hovered in the blue sky, wheeling and calling, with chickadees and titmice answering. Even the robins appeared on schedule.

If the great outdoors is beckoning to you, too, you are invited to join the South Shore Bird Club's day-long tour on the 22nd of April. Myron and Beverly Litchfield will lead the outing to selected spots on the South Shore.

Members and guests will meet at 8 a.m. in the parking area of the Deerskin Trading Post on Rte. 139 in Marshfield. Bring a lunch and anyone who is interested in wild life and conservation.

Things to do this Saturday include the Merrimack Valley African Violet Society show and plant sale at Grace Episcopal Church in Lawrence. Admission is free from 1 to 5 p.m. If your morning is free, plan to attend a lecture by Ed and Millie Thompson sponsored by the American Begonia Society at Mass. Bay Community College, 50 Oakland St., Wellesley Hills from 9:30 to 12:00.

You can wind up the day by attending the first fund-raising dinner of the newly formed Minot's Ledge Chapter of Ducks Unlimited. Proceeds go to the organization which for the past 40 years has contributed much to the preservation of our waterfowl.
